

Vessels of Mercy International Again Meets Better Business Bureau's High Standards

For the third consecutive year, Vessels of Mercy International has achieved recognition as meeting the Better Business Bureau's 20 Standards for Charity Accountability.

“The evaluation process involves rigorous scrutiny of a charity’s governance, effectiveness, finances, solicitations and informational materials,” said Art Taylor, president and chief executive officer of the BBB’s Wise Giving Alliance. “The standards go far beyond what government regulators require.”

The BBB’s Wise Giving Alliance Standards for Charity Accountability were developed to assist donors in making sound giving decisions and to foster public confidence in charitable organizations. The standards seek to encourage fair and honest solicitation practices, promote ethical conduct by charitable organizations and advance the support of philanthropy.

“Vessels of Mercy International is committed to wisely using the resources provided by donors,” said Bev. Gibson, Vessels of Mercy International’s Founder and chief executive officer. “We always strive to act with integrity, honesty and openness while making financial decisions that best enable us to help save lives and alleviate the suffering of others.”

Vessels of Mercy International has also been recognized for its charitable efficiency by other organizations such as United Way and Combined Federal Campaign. Vessels of Mercy International provides full disclosure of its use of financial resources and regularly submits its records for independent review.

Vessels of Mercy International is a nonprofit agency that annually provides more than 86% of its donated funds to provide medical, dental, vision care products and services to people in developing countries. As well as food, clothes, water, spiritual education, vocational training and assisting children in crisis.
